Background

The Liquor Control and Licensing Branch licences B.C. businesses that make and sell liquor by the glass or bottle, and inspects these businesses to ensure they comply with provincial liquor laws. There are approximately 8,800 licensed establishments in B.C., and 50 compliance and enforcement staff. They are located throughout the province, and can be contacted through the Branch's website.

Liquor inspectors work closely with police and local government staff to encourage licensees to voluntarily comply and reduce potential threats to public safety such as overcrowding, intoxication and service to minors. Liquor inspectors also regularly inspect licensed premises to monitor compliance. When a liquor inspector has evidence that a licensee is contravening the Liquor Control and Licensing Act, Regulations or a licence term and condition, the inspector must issue a Contravention Notice.

Depending on the type of contravention and the establishments' past history, the Liquor Control and Licensing Branch may recommend imposing a penalty as a result of the issued Contravention Notice. These include fines, placing additional terms and conditions on the licence (such as shorter hours), and suspending or cancelling the licence.

In this case the licensee can either accept the contravention and recommended penalty alleged by the branch and sign a waiver, or contest the recommended penalty at an enforcement hearing. Money received from fines goes to provincial government general revenue.

Liquor inspectors also inspect an establishment before the branch approves a new licence, or approves a change to an existing business – such as adding a patio.
